Look to your left and take a photo at 15, 30, 45 and 0 past the hour. Be in the moment and focus on the time. Maybe your angle or height changes at each time.

Imagine you are walking home after a long day at work. What would be catching your eye and relaxing you?

Look to your right and take a photo at 15, 30, 45 and 0 past the hour. Be in the moment and focus on the time. Maybe adjust your angle or height at each time.

Find a leaf, weed or small plant and take a photo through or around it. Hold it really close to the lens, maybe in the corner. See how the edges cloud the image.

Ask to take a portrait of each participant's hair. Maybe from behind them, or maybe side-on. People have such different hair.

Swap your camera with another participant. Maybe swap it a few times with different participants. Check how many you'd like each other to take!

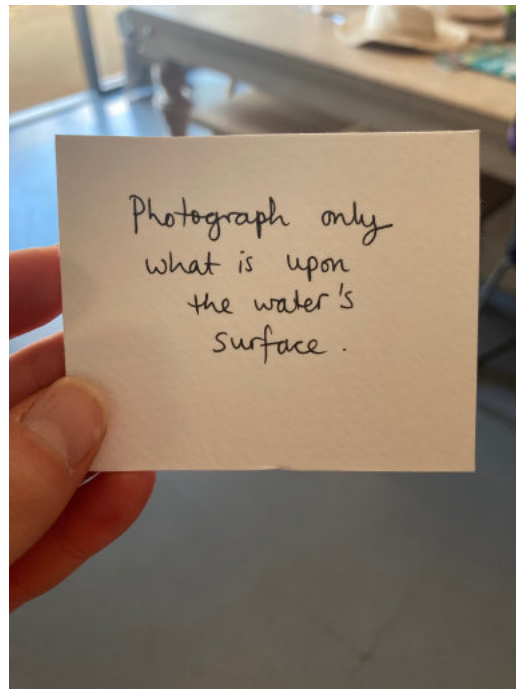

Photograph only what is upon the water's surface.

Ask if you can take photographs of each participant's hands. If they don't like their hands, which body part would they prefer to be photographed?

Focus on surfaces. How many different surfaces can you photograph? Think about a dictionary of surfaces.

Alternate your picture taking between things that are circular and things with straight lines. Which subject matter are you most drawn to?
